Abstract

The global macroeconomic climate remains fragile. Many challenging aspects of the financial markets have had an undisputed impact on the real economy. This shall not slow the transformation of palm markets into sustainable solutions! We rather need to maintain and even accelerate our commitment and speed for the transition. This remains a challenges in derivatives, for many reasons, among others: commitment of participants, complexity of value chains, cost. I will talk for 15 minutes about the challenges and a possible way forward.
